Use See the Cat in your classroom to teach about point of view and dialogue.

- As you read the book, ask your students to consider who is telling the story. How do they know? Define the role of a narrator and note that it is a particular point of view.
- Have your students draw their own characters and write dialogue in speech bubbles.
- Have the class write sentences, then write them again with the word not in them to make sentences with opposite meanings.
- Use See the Cat for a readers' theater script. Encourage your students to consider the punctuation and facial expressions when practicing how their voice should sound when reading aloud.
